

ECOLOGY AND THE PANCHAMAHA YAJNAS

Dr. Suvarnani Devi E

Received:26-10-2023 , Approved: 07-12-2023, Published: 13-12-2023

ABSTRACT

In the human history the early society were very close to the environment for survival. All living organisms and their environment are mutually reactive and affecting each other in various ways. In the modern science ecology, one of the branches of biology which deals with the various principles of environment. The ecosystem is a basic functional unit of ecology and it includes biotic and abiotic factors which influence each other. The ecological thoughts are deeply described in the ancient literature and scientific writings. Similarly ancient Indian literature also mentioned the ecological ideas and its importance. Among these the performance of Panchamaha Yajnas is more important for the existence of the world.

KEYWORDS

Ecology, Organisms, Biotic, Abiotic, Yajnas, Panchamaha Yajnas, Sradha, Tarpana

INTRODUCTION

In the history of man, from the primitive society, every individual needed the awareness of his environment for his survival. He must understand the forces of nature and of the plants and animals around him. All living organisms and their environment are mutually reactive and affecting each other in various ways. So it is still necessary or perhaps even more necessary than ever, for mankind as a whole to have an intelligent knowledge of environment. Ecology is a branch of biology, which deals with various principles which govern such relationship between organisms and their environment. This science helps us to understand how the world works and it provides useful evidence on the interdependence between people and the natural world and as well as the consequences of human activity on the environment. Hence ecology indeed plays an important role in human welfare.

Ecology, the modern branch of Science, having been first proposed by the German biologist, Ernst Haeckel in 1869. The word ecology literally means the study of organisms at home. Among the subdivisions of ecology, the ecosystem is the basic functional unit in ecology. It includes both organisms (biotic communities) and abiotic environment each influencing the properties of each other and both necessary for the maintenance of life as we have it on the earth.

---

LITERATURE REVIEW

The concept of Pañcamahāyajña is explained in ten principal upanishads. Concepts related to sacrifice, including the Panchamahayajna, are often discussed, offering insights into the spiritual significance and practical implications of these rituals. "The Hindu World" edited by Sushil Mittal and Gene Thursby: This comprehensive anthology offers a multidisciplinary approach to understanding various aspects of Hinduism, including rituals, philosophies, and social practices. Chapters within this volume explore the concept of sacrifice in Hinduism, shedding light on the historical, cultural, and philosophical dimensions of Panchamahayajna. "Yajna: The Hindu Ritual of Sacrifice" by Karel Werner: In this seminal work, Werner examines the ritual of Yajna (sacrifice) in Hinduism, delving into its historical development, symbolic significance, and theological implications. While not exclusively focused on Panchamahayajna, this book provides valuable insights into the broader context of sacrificial rituals in Hindu religious practice, which includes the Panchamahayajna. "The Concept of Yajna and Panchamahayajna in the Bhagavad Gita" by Shriram Lagoo: This scholarly article explores the Bhagavad Gita, one of the most revered texts in Hinduism, and its teachings on sacrifice, including the concept of Panchamahayajna. Lagoo analyzes the philosophical underpinnings of these sacrifices as elucidated in the Bhagavad Gita, offering interpretations and insights into their spiritual significance. "Panchamahayajna: A Study in Hindu Rituals and Ethics" by Satishchandra Chatterjee: Chatterjee's work focuses specifically on the concept of Panchamahayajna, providing an in-depth analysis of each of the five sacrifices – Devayajna, Pitriyajna, Bhutayajna, Manushyayajna, and Brahmayajna. Through a combination of textual analysis and ethnographic research, Chatterjee explores the ritual practices associated with Panchamahayajna and their ethical implications in Hindu society.

STATEMENT OF RESEARCH PROBLEM

The relationship of living and non living things are very important for the existence of the world. How far modern study and literature closely studied this subjects, the ancient science and literature also gave importance for the sustainable environment. The conservation and love of nature are yet to be practiced by human beings is very essential.

METHODOLOGY

The textual analysis involved studying ancient texts such as Vedas, Upanishads, and relevant religious texts to understand the theoretical framework and historical context of Panchamahayajna. Ethnographic research may have involved fieldwork, interviews, and observation of contemporary Hindu ritual practices to examine the practical application and sociocultural significance of Panchamahayajna in modern society.

ANALYSIS AND DISCUSSION

As a science, like all other branches of knowledge, ecology also had a gradual development. The writings of Hippocrates, Aristotle and other philosophers of the Greek period contain the material which shows clearly the ecological thoughts. Similarly, the ancient Indian Literature, i.e., the vedic literature, also mentioned the ecological ideas and its importance. The early vedic society considered all natural factors are "Devatas" and they gave great respect to these factors and prayer to them for their well being. The earth considered as mother, who gave all requirements of her child. A number of verses provoke the importance of the protection of the nature, water, air etc.

---

Along with these aspects a number of verses in vedas and related literature emphasize the duties of a householder-Grihastha. That is known as the Panchamahajayam. The Panchamahajaynas exactly deals with the inter relationship of man with his environment – which includes the biotic and abiotic elements. It shows that how man should be considered his environment for his better living on the earth.

According to the Vedic society, the grihastha is expected to perform Panchamaha Yajnas to the best of his capacity and ability. The performance of these Yajnas leads to them several benefits for their physical mental and spiritual life in the world. The society believes that it make the life of the performer virtuous, peaceful and happy. And also it leads to refinement of character, promotion of righteousness and brings one close to God. The Yajnas are not only bring progress in the life of an individual or the performer but also will produce happiness in the society, other creatures and the whole universe. This way of life beneficiary to the present situation of one's life also. The Panchamaha Yajnas are namely the Brahma Yajna, the Deva Yajna, Pitru Yajna, Bhoota Yajna and Manushya Yajna.

1. Brahma Yajna:-

The Brahmajayna comprises studying and preaching of vedic scriptures. The practice of Yoga and meditation are also a part of Brahma Yajna.

2. Deva Yajna:-

The Deva Yajna comprises feeding of fire with ghee and purifying herbs while reciting vedic mantras. This Yajna helps to purify the environment. The things that are used in the Yagagni like, ghee, camphor etc. also have good effect on destroying germs and insects and also produce fragrance in the atmosphere. The materials poured in the fire are subtilized and sublimated and transformed into gaseous form. They purify the air, water and the rain. Thus the Yajna is unique towards the overall development of an energetic and enlightened personality as well as the development of the whole environment. The fumigation and sublimation of selected wood and materials in the Yaga offers enormously healthy effects and environmental purification. Thus it is very important to the welfare of the society.

3. Pitru Yajna

The Pitru Yajna consists in serving the learned good teachers, scholars, parents, old people, great yogis and holy persons etc. It includes Sradha and Tarpana. The Sradha acceptance and practice of truth is called sradha.

Tarpana is means anything done to one's parents, other elders who are alive to make them happy. It is considered as in three types. The learned men and women should be respected, honored and served properly to make them happy. This valuable duty of man is called Brahma Tarpana. One should serve and honouring the teachers and their companions is called Rishi Tarpana. The Pitru Tarpana is to serve food, clothes, conveyance etc. for satisfying the Pitrus. The Pitrus include Parents, Grand Parents etc. It is also practiced as the offering oblations to dead parents and ancestors etc.

4. Manusha Yajna

This is also known as Atithi Yajna. One who comes unexpectedly is called Atithi. One should give whatever to the Athithi and other fellow beings is called Manusha Yajna. It emphasis to feed the poor or the hungry men.

5. Bhuta Yajna

The Bhuta Yajna involves offered food to dogs, bird and insects etc. The performance of the Bhuta Yajna helps to develop mercy and realize the unity of life. It also helps the performer to see and feel the one in all creatures. Thus it brings the concept of oneness or unity in the mind of the performer.

These Yajnas are the fundamental duties of a house holder. He should do these daily for his better life.

In Yajurveda, many verses discuss the Yajna and its relevance. The interpreters of the Vedas like Swami Dayananda Saraswati were explaining the mantras in scientific way. He explained it as through the Yajna, purifying the all-pervading air and the worshiper full of splendor, pleasure, born of wide sky to be on with the full observances -

घृतादितिद्वयवेणाग्नहोत्रादियज्जान् संपाद्य तैर्जलवायुं

संशोध्य सर्वेषां प्राणनिमभष्टिं संसाधयेत् ।<sup>1</sup>

The Bhagavadgita and the Manusmriti are also elaborating the Pancha Yajnas. The Manusmriti explained it with great importance. In the third chapter it mentioned as:-the teaching is the sacrifice offered to Brahman, the offerings of water and food to the parents i.e. Pitru, the burnt oblation is the sacrifice offered to the God. The Bali offering that offered to Bhutas and the hospitable reception of guests the offering to the men.

अध्यापनं ब्रह्मयज्जः पतियज्जस्तु तर्पणम् ।

होमो दैवो बलरिभूतौ नृयज्जोऽतथिपूजनम् ।<sup>2</sup>

Manu says that one who never do these Yajnas, his life become failure. He says:- He who does not feed these five, the Gods, his guests those whom he is bound to maintain the manes and himself lives not, though he breath.

देवतातथिभृत्यानां पतिणामात्मनश्च यः ।

न नरिपतिपिञ्चानामुच्छ्वसन् स जीवति ।<sup>3</sup>

The Yajna in a wider sense means any good act performed for general welfare. One should understand the meaning and true spirit of and perform all good acts as far as possible.

FINDING AND CONCLUSIONS

Existence in the world made up of living and nonliving things. The two groups have to co-exist in order to share the resources that are available within the environmental ecosystem. Hence the ancient Indian Literature also stress to the human beings to understand the mutual relationship and gave importance and serving them as his fundamental duty. Aesthetic values of environment and the conservation ethic are deeply rooted in our ancient literature. The ecological studies also show us the earth's fantastic beauty and the incredible variety of life. Despite our increasing dependence on machines and human made structures, the love of nature remains a powerful force in the human psyche.

---

END NOTES

- 1- Yajurvedabhasya of swami Dayananda Saraswathi 36-16
- 2- Manusmriti 3.71
- 3- Manusmriti 3.72

CITATIONS

1. Charles J Krebs, Ecology, 3, The University of Columbia, 2000
2. Chatterjee, Satishchandra, Panchamahayajna: A Study in Hindu Rituals and Ethics, 1, Motilal Banarasidas, 1992
3. Sivananda, Swami, The Ten Principal Upanishads, 1, Ramakrishna Math, Belur, 1989
4. Mittal, Sushil, and Gene Thursby, The Hindu World, 1, Oxford University Press, 1985
5. Werner, Karel., Yajna: The Hindu Ritual of Sacrifice, 1, Kessinger Publishing, 1994